Soul Food Junkies

by Byron Hurt

Filmmaker Byron Hurt explores the upsides and downsides of soul food, a quintessential American cuisine. Soul Food Junkies explores the history and social significance of soul food to black cultural identity and its effect on African American health, good and bad. Soul food will also be used as the lens to investigate the dark side of the food industry and the growing food justice movement that has been born in its wake.

Post screening discussion with Cecil D. Corbin-Mark, Deputy Director, WE ACT and Susan Rodriguez, Founding Director, SMART. Moderated by Dr. Lydia Isaac, Assistant Professor, Community Health, Hunter SPH. Panel followed by healthy tips and treats, courtesy of SMART.

Free and open to the public.
